DEMOCRACY IS A BURDEN |

A Continuance of the List of Tax-Payers of Indianapolis Given.

The Names of Those Whose Holdings in 1890 and 1891 Were Identical Given-The Poor Man Oppressed by Democracy.

The list of tax-payers of the city of Indianapolis is continued below. All names are given, whether the taxes have been increased or decreased. The names are given of all whose holdings for 1890 and 1891 were identical. Corporations are omitted. Names are not taken where improvements have been made or removed during the year, or where the sale or purchase of land has changed the holding in any respect. Readers are requested to compare their tax receipts with the list, and report any maccuracies to the Journal for correction. The taxes of Jacob and Charles Becker were enormously increased; but the list does the tax authorities a slight injustice, as in the case of Charles Becker a piece of property on which the taxes were $19.60, is included in the taxes for 1891, which was taxed in another name for 1890. The increase really was from $730.46 to $1,189.61, enough in all reason. The list still shows the heaviest percentage of increase to be on the poor, who really ought not to have any right to own property at all, according to Mr. Taggart's theory, and must be dis-couraged in every way by disproportion-ately increasing their taxes. The prejudice against certain names already noted is still apparent, as witness the taxes of Frederica Beinke. Sophia Belck, Annie Beletzki, Angust Bennerscheidt, Wm. Benz, George Benzel, Emma Bergner, Francis Bergmann, Elizabeth Bernauer, Daniel and Peter

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

Indianapolis Divisions Ready to Leave for Kansas City To-day.

Last night the different divisions of the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, of this city marched from their different armories to Washington and Tennessee streets, from which point they marched to the courthouse grounds for a final dress parade beforestarting for Kansas City to attend the Uniform Rank conclave of the world, beginning in that city next Tuesday and lasting eight days.

The special train will leave at 1:20 this afternoon. It is handsomely decorated for the trip. Excelsior Division, No. 43, commanded by Capt. H. C. Castor, will take thirty-two knights, including the captain, two lieutenants, two guides, one herald and one hospital steward. It will enter for the $3,200 prize and make its best effort to secure it. Indianapolis Division, No. 2, and its fifty-four members, by Capt. George Powell, will, with its ladies, occupy two chair cars.

Division No. 2 is the oldest one in this city and will not compete for the grand prize, but will enter the battalion contest to compete for the five-hundred-dollar battalion prize. This is the only part No. 2 will take in the drill. Division No. 56, with Capt. Ed Stott commanding, will take forty Knights, with a treat and second lientenant. This division will occupy a special Pullman car. Four ladies will accompany it. Its quarters will be in its car, while the others will go into camp. This is the wealthiest division in this city.

Captain Many Division, No. 18, with Capt.

C. J. Many in charge, will take twenty-four members, two guards, three officers and three extras. This division will be greatly disappointed if it does not get first or second prize, as its practice has been long and Indianapolis Division. No. 64, consolidated recently with 43, and will be under Capt. H. C. Castor.

Division No. 18 is the oldest division of this city entered for the prize drill, and will make a good showing, owing to its good discipline and its drill contest experiences in the past. There are seven divisions from Indiana entered for the divisions from Indiana entered for the prize contest, while as organizations no less that two thousand Sir Knights will go. Indiana takes a larger number of Knights to these contests because General Ross is the senior major of the Uniformed Rank in the United States, and always gets a place of honor on that account, which the Indiana Knights have always endeavored to sustain by their attendance and equipment. This contest is an epoch-marker in the Knights of Pythias world. The general opinion seems to be that the Hoosier capital will play an important figure at the conclave. Next Tuesday will-be parade day at Kansas City, as the contest or prize drill cannot be commenced before Wednesday. The Knights will go into camp in the eastern part of that city, and the drill will take place at the baseball park. Quartermasters left here for Kansas City last Wednesday to make all necessary arrangements for the accommodation of the Indiana Knights on their arrival.

BARON HIRSCH'S GREAT PLAN. Proposing to Remove All the Jews from Russia at His Own Expense.

Illustrated American. In some respects, Baron Hirsch's proposi-In some respects, Baron Hirsch's proposition to remove all of his co-religionists from Russia and transplant them to lands where they would be secure from persecution on account of their taith and their race, is the greatest undertaking projected by man. It can be compared in magnitude of design and difficulty of undertaking with such myths as the building of the Tower of Babel. Yet so wonderful has been the development of man's methods of transportation and power of organization that there is no reason to suppose the project impossible of realto suppose the project impossible of realization under favorable conditions. So far as the mere question of transportation is concerned, the late Thomas Cook may be said to have solved it. If the migration were extended over a period of years, under the system perfected by him, it could be carried on so smoothly as to be almost imperceptible.

It has been estimated that one-half of the Hebrew race is living in the dominions of the Czar. The number of individuals of the Czar. The number of individuals has been put at three and a half millions, which is probably greater than that of any of the barbarian peoples who descended from their plains and forests upon the Roman empire at the period of its decline. It would be the greatest migration of which we have knowledge. To be successful it would be necessary that it should not inflict hardship or suffering either upon the emigrants themselves or upon the people with whom they might come in contact. The or upon the people with whom they might come in contact. The operation would resemble greatly the transplanting of an entire forest. Each individual family must be taken up from the soil in which it is now rooted, transported with extreme solicitude, and replanted in soil adapted to its needs. After the transfer shall have been accomplished it would still be necessary to watch each individual family to see that it takes root in its new home. The mere expense, which Baron Hirsch is willing to assume, would be stupendous, and the mental labor would be greater.

The migration would be a radical solu-tion of the terrible problem of the Jews in Russia could it be accomplished suc-cessfully, and it would make Baron Hirsch live in history as one of the greatest philanthropists the world has ever known. He would rank with Moses and Mahomet. Confucius and Lycurgus, among the great law-givers and leaders of men.

He Was a Spunky Fellow.

Washington Star. "Well," said Mrs. Bruggins, after a solo by a fashionable church choir tenor, "if that ain't the rudest thing I ever saw!"

"What?" inquired her niece.
"Why, didn't you notice it? Just as soon as that young man began to sing every other member of the choir stopped. But he went right through with it, and I must say I admire his spunk."

No Need to Decamp. Boston Transcript.

A Philadelphia attorney has decamped with a deficiency behind him of $150,000. It is so strange that a lawyer should convey his client's money to himself dishonestly, when by attending to business he would eventually get the whole of it in the natural and honorable way.

For some time coffee stories have been on tap at this restaurant about 12 o'clock at night when the social knot generally ties up at the good old greasy lunch-counter, or draws its better rations over the tiled table set apart for the "full meal." About three months ago Mr. G --- announced to the little company that he had purchased a wonderful bull pup. Its pedigree was beyond question, and ran back to royal blood. The canine had shown symptoms of peculiar precociousness, and fell into his hands in a singular way. A traveling salesman for an Eastern nursery had passed his house, and had been compelled to remain until he could give Mr. G-one of the beautiful brood, aside from other money consideration, for his hospitality. Not only was he given one of the spotless variety in the basket under the stairs, but was also given his choice of the vicious brute's newest treasure trove. The pup in question had pleased his discriminating eye on account of its complexion and general disposition. Every day that pup, nurtured on the bottle, gave some new evidence of his natural preferred social standing in the world of dogs, and every night Mr. G- was fonder of nothing, except his chops, than to tell them over to the little company. "Now, that reminds me of my bull pup," he would say. "That fellow is a prince in disguise, and no mistake. He can inflate pacity of the greenest rubber balloon ever let loose at a country fair, and it don't seem to injure his digestive machinery." Every day, naturally enough, the pup grew older, and was fast blossoming out into an elegant animal, with a Ben Butler expression in his eyes, and a truly Democratic fighting instinct. For years his wife's life had been made a burden to her by the number of cats who caucussed nightly on the kitchen roof, or played nine-pins under the kitchen floor, and with the intuition of a missionary this dog went about his mission of either civilizing or eradicating that nocturnal congress. pacity of the greenest rubber balloon occupied a seat of honor on the front porch and was always on the qui vive.

"One night last week," said Mr. G., "I did not get home until daylight, and found my wife in a terribly nervous state. She had spent an almost sleepless night, and come to the door to let me in trembling like a leaf. The night before she had let the dog in the house, feeling safer with the animal nearer her. About 10 o'clock in the evening the dog woke up the children by his growls. She heard somebody walking on the porch, and stealing gently to the window unlatched heard somebody walking on the porch, and stealing gently to the window unlatched it, flung a shutter back quickly and let the dog through. He had jumped out with an angry, eager lunge. The night was dark outside. She heard a souffle, a curse—the growling of the dog, and then all was silent. After a long time she dared to hoist the window and call the dog. He had responded promptly by drumming the porch with the tough end of his short, stub tail. She lighted the lartern, opened the door, and the dog brushed in with the seat of a man's pants in his teeth. Then she locked the door, but could not sleep."

On the success at that point as rapidly as his free-trade prejudice will permit, and was flashing in the bright and burning sun of Saturday a very pretty sample of the output, with the proud imprint, "American tim." He was telling of a shipment of a number of thousand dollars worth of last week's manufacture, when a disappointed Democrat had a regular soda-water overflow and exclaimed, "My God! is that possible!"

The Cleveland campaign buttons marked C. and S. recalt the old cartridge-belt

This story had had its effect on the little company. Yesterday I met Mrs. G. on the College-avenue car, and as I get off at the same street, I asked to help her with several small bundles with which she had loaded herself. When we got within a square of the house I begged her pardon, and told her, if she would excuse me, I would go no

"But why-why can't you step in and take tea with us?" I thanked her and, in explanation, assured her I was not fond of pull-dogs. She seemed surprised, and asked me what dog I referred to. I totd her it was her particular property I most feared.

"Why," said she, "we have no dog!"
"What—have you sold him so soon, or "Oh, we never have had a dog since we were married. I detest dogs, but Harry is very fond of them."

POSED AS A MAN.

But When It Came to Rooming with One, that Was Another Matter.

New York Tribune. A young married woman in this city, who is a doctor of medicine and is slowly building up a nice practice, often finds it useful, when writing to people she does not know, to sign herself "Dr. R—," instead of "Dr. Theodora R—," and once this latter habit got her into an awkward situation.

It is her custom to spend her summer vacation in a quiet Maine town which is most easily reached by boat from Boston. This time she telegraphed shead to the Boston steamship line: "Keep me a berth for tomorrow night," and signed it "Dr. R—."
She was pretty well known to the officers and agents of the line and had no doubt that that was enough to secure it. Reaching Boston by rail she burried down to ing Boston by rail, she hurried down to ing Boston by rail, she hurried down to the boat without going to the agent's office. Once on board, she greeted the steward as an old friend and went straight to her cabin and began to make herself comfortable. The boat had not got well under way before there came a knocking at the door, and when she opened it a big fat man peered in, and then started back with an angry look on his face.

"This is my cabin," he said.

"Excuse me, sir. It is mine."

"Here is my check and key, with the proper number on it."

"Mine bears the same."

"There must be; but the blunder is not mine, sir." "It must be, madam. It is not likely that two gentlemen would be mistakenly assigned to your state-room." "Are there two gentlemen assigned here?"

"There must be some blunder, madam."

"Yes. madam. The upper berth has been taken by myself and the lower by Dr. R-, of New York." Then it dawned upon Dr. Theodora R—that she was not as well known to the agents as she thought. They had supposed

Dr. R-to be a man, and had assigned her to a state-room with another man. This all flashed through her mind in a twinkling. Then she said: "Excuse me, sir; this is evidently my mistake," and, gathering up her things with a swoop, she marched out into the saloon and sat there all night, sooner than make public the laughable predicament in which she had placed herself.

SIBERIA'S WONDERFUL LAKE.

Averages a Mile in Depth and Is Frozen

Nine Months in the Year. On the road from Irkutsk to Kiakhta, the frontier town of the Chinese empire, the monotony of the journey is broken by crossing Lake Baikal, a wonderful lake frozen for nine months in the year, which has sixty times the area of the Lake of Geneva, and has an average depth of no less than 5,404 feet, or more than a mile. The cold is so terrible that when a hurricane stirs the waters the waves often freeze as waves, remaining in hummocks above the surface; but when J. M. Price, author of "From the Arctic Ocean to the Yellow Sea," crossed the cold had caught the lake asleep and the ice was perfectly smooth. He had thirty miles to drive on the solidified water. "For about a mile from the shore the ice had a thin layer of snow over it, but we gradually left this sort of dazzling white carpet, and at length reached the clear ice, when I saw around me the most wonderful and bewitching sight I ever beheld. Owing to the transparency of the water the ice pre-sented every where the appearance of pol-ished crystal, and, although undoubtedly of great thickness, was so colorless that it was like passing over space. It gave me, at first, an uncanny feeling to look over the side of the sledge down into the black abysa beneath; this feeling, however. gradually changed to one of fasci-nation, till at last I found it positively difficult to withdraw my gaze from theawful depths, with nothing but this sheet of orystal between me and eternity. I believe that most travelers, on crossing the lake on the ice for the first time, experience the same weird and fascinating influence, About half way across I stopped to make a sketch and take some photographs. It was of the sledge, for the ice was so slip-pery that, in spite of my having felt snow-boots on, I could hardly stand. The deathlike silence of the surroundings was occasionally broken, however, by curious sounds, as though big guns were being fired at some little distance. They were caused by the cracking of the ice here and there. I was told that in some parts of the lake were huge fissures, through which the water could be seen. It is for this reason that it is always advisable to do the journey by daylight. We reached Moufshkays, on the opposite coast, exactly four and a half hours after leaving Liestvenitz, the horses having done the whole distance of thirty miles with only two stoppages of a few minutes each. It was evidently an easy bit of work for them, as they seemed as fresh when we drew up in the post-yard as when they started in the morning." caused by the cracking of the ice here and

How to Land a Black Bass.

C. F. Danforth, in New England Magazine.

When a black bass is hooked, the only way you can judge of his movements and intentions is by the sense of feeling exerted through the rod and line, and by watching the line at its point of contact with the surface of the water, from which point never remove your eye until he is brought safely to bag. He will resort to every means in his power to get rid of the remorseless steel, sometimes breaking water four or five times. When a fish is seen to be making pell-mell for the surface, and is bound to get there, no matter what happens, he can often be checked, just before he breaks water, by moving the rod quickly and steadily to the right or left, keeping a taut line, of course, all the while; but, should this not succeed, and he breaks water in spite of you, lower the point of the rod a little, otherwise it may be smashed. Care must be taken in this in order that he may not throw his weight and bring the whole force of his jump to bear on the straight taut line, or fall back on the taut line—either of which is extremely liable to produce the result spoken of. If you get a strike when trolling, keep the line taut and the boat in motion, slackening its speed somewhat, of course; for give him but a few inches of slack and up he goes into the air like a rocket and is gone. sessions of the restaurant committee, that dog never failed to figure in the conversation of one single evening. He had developed into a zero. Everybody in the group had had that dog's personal appearance photographed upon his imagination until any one of the crowd would have known him had they met him down street on a dark night. The brute had come to be the terror of the neighborhood; had at last claimed the title of "family custodian." He had grown surly, but through it all was rational. He occupied a seat of honor on the front porch and was always on the qui vive.

"One night last week," said Mr. G., "I did not get home until daylight, and found my wife in a terribly nervous state. She had Used Everything Five Months, In Three Weeks not a Scar or Pimple. Cured by Cuticura.

When my baby was three months old his cheeks and forehead began to break out with white pim-ples on red surface. In a few days itching commenced, which was terrible. After he would rub it, matter would coze from the points. In a short time it spread over the top of his head, then scabs soon formed on head and face. We used everything we could hear of for nearly five months, It grew worse all the time. I saw your advertisement of the Cu-ticura remedies in the "Chicago Weekly." We purchased Cuticura Remdies and commenced their use. In three weeks' time there was not a sore or pimple, not even a scar, on head or face. He is nineteen months old now, and has no signs of the disease. His scalp is healthy, and he has a beautiful head of hair. (See portrait herewith.)
